

The Kansas Law Review

2008 Symposium

Law, Reparations, and Racial Disparities

Friday October 31, 2008

9:00 am – 5:00 pm

Green Hall, 1535 W. 15th Street, Lawrence, Kansas 66045

The Symposium will gather a distinguished group of scholars in law, philosophy, economics, sociology, and political science to explore what law can learn from empirical research on racial disparities in wealth, health, education, and the criminal justice system, and to assess whether legal reparations for slavery can be a viable means of dealing with these persistent disparities. Please plan to attend what promises to be an engaging discussion of this important and timely issue.

Featured Speakers

Roy Brooks (University of San Diego School of Law) — Derrick Darby (University of Kansas) — William Darity, Jr. (Duke University) — Adrienne Davis (Washington University School of Law) — Stacy Elmer (University of Kansas) — Daniela Ikawa (Conectas Human Rights / Public Interest Law Institute) — Kevin Outterson (Boston University School of Law) — Ruth Peterson (The Ohio State University) — Cassia Spohn (Arizona State University) — Bruce Western (Harvard University)

Sponsored By

The Hall Center for the Humanities — University of Kansas College of Liberal Arts & Sciences — University of Kansas Department of Economics — University of Kansas Department of Sociology—University of Kansas Department of Public Administration

Attendance is free and no reservations are required. Please contact Symposium Editor Kelly Foos for more information: 785/766-2946; kfoos@ku.edu.